SUBIECTUL I

Read the following text.

Islands of the South Pacific

There are many islands in the South Pacific. These are tropical islands. The weather is warm all year round. Some trees on the islands are coconut palms. They are very useful because they grow well in sandy and salty places near the seashore where other kinds of trees can't grow. Some people eat coconuts. The islanders can also dry the nuts to make oil. They can use the trunks of the trees for buildings and the leaves for making roofs for their houses.
